

Your doctor can give you details of the risks and benefits of your potential treatment options. The following questions may help you discuss these options with your physician. Only your health-care professional can determine the right treatment for you.

- How do I know I have coronary artery disease?
 - What are my options for treating coronary artery disease?
 - How do these options compare to one another?
 - What are the benefits/risks of each?
 - What's the most important thing I should consider when choosing one of these options?
 - How are bare-metal and the drug-eluting stents different?
 - Are there differences between the various drug-eluting stents?
 - If a drug-eluting stent is the best option for me, which drug-eluting stent is supported by the most long-term medical evidence?
 - How do I know if I'm a good candidate for receiving a stent?
 - What can I expect after the procedure? What type of medicines will I need to take?
